From the Pastor

No Cross, No Easter (and Vice-Versa)

Rev. Benjamin Broadbent

"Why doesn't the season of Lent include the Sundays?" That questions came up during a Children's Message and I didn't know the answer. You better believe I looked it up. The answer I found was simple: Easter. Every Sunday is a "little Easter," a day to remember God's defeat of death through Christ's resurrection.

This year we will recognize a hybrid Palm / Passion Sunday. Most Christians won't attend a service on the second most important day of the year, Good Friday. Moving from Palm Sunday to Easter without experiencing the story of Jesus' betrayal, abandonment, trial, and death is like following ice cream for dinner with cake for dessert. Both are yummy, but cake doesn't taste as good after an entrée of ice cream. Besides, that's not a very balanced diet.

To experience Easter, we need to experience the cross. My preaching professor, Chuck Campbell, writes, "Whereas crucifixion frees us from our illusions..., the resurrection frees us from the fear of death." Conversely, the cross makes no sense apart from the Easter promise. Again, Campbell: "The resurrection not only confirms the way of the cross as the way of God but also sets the church free from the fear of death that so often prevents us from 'taking up our cross' and following Jesus."

Freed from illusions. Set free from the fear of death. Easter means the power of the resurrection belongs to the church – not power over, but power with – power to take up our cross and follow Jesus into places, and with people, we might otherwise avoid. And that power is renewed in us not only on Easter Sunday, but every Sunday.

Growing in Leadership Together

By Rev. Benjamin Broadbent, Senior Minister

On March 11, 22 members of Community Church gathered for a Leadership Event which was open to the congregation but focused on people in leadership positions. Members of the Church Council and Staff Team explored some guiding concepts together and tapped into collective wisdom.

Guiding Concepts...

- Cultivating a Growth Mindset – To cultivate a growth mindset is to see oneself as constantly in the process of learning and adjusting. As church leaders, we want to be able to show something for our efforts (success), but even more satisfying is to learn as we go. Church work is less of a fixed science and more of a relational art, so the process is at least as important as the product. [Resource: “Thanks for the Feedback: The Science and Art of Receiving Feedback Well” by Douglas Stone and Sheila Heen (2014)]
- Governance & Ministry – The work of the church can be divided into two basic, at times overlapping, categories: governance and ministry. Governance includes articulating mission, developing strategy, safeguarding resources, delegating responsibility, and evaluating programs. Ministry is everything else – teaching Sunday School, improving the facility, singing in a choir, leading a class. Whenever we meet – as a Council, Staff, Committee, or program – we should get clear about whether we are doing governance work or ministry work. [Resource: “Governance and Ministry: Rethinking Board Leadership” by Dan Hotchkiss (2009)]
- Technical versus Adaptive Challenges – We face technical challenges face with skills and tools and people we already have. Adaptive challenges require experimentation, new discoveries, and novel adjustments. Technical tasks are routine while adaptive tasks address deeper values, cultural norms, and strategic directions. Example: Not enough Sunday School teachers. Technical response: “When can we include a bulletin announcement asking for people to sign up?” Adaptive response: “Has our church’s commitment to Sunday School changed over time? How might we reimagine children’s full involvement in the life of our community?” [Resource: “Leadership on the Line: Staying Alive through the Dangers of Leading” by Ronald Heifetz and Marty Linsky (2002)]

Collective Wisdom...

In one Leadership Event activity, we collaborated to identify various Strengths and Weaknesses of our church community as well as Opportunities and Threats (S.W.O.T.) facing our church from the wider culture. Here are some examples:

- Strengths – generous givers, meaningful Sunday worship, sense of history, strong Youth Ministry, active outreach activities, varied music program, energy with new pastor
- Weaknesses – aging congregation, we do not represent the full diversity of our region, volunteer burnout, integration of new people
- Opportunities – engagement with wider community, participation in wider settings of our denomination, increase our diversity, improve relationships with people of other faiths, nurture programs that have wide and varied appeal
- Threats – polarizing political climate, negative attitudes toward “organized” religion, lack of affordable house decreases diversity, people have overfull busy lives

These concepts and insights will be incorporated into future monthly Church Council meetings and weekly Staff Team meetings. The goal is to nurture new ways of seeing ourselves and talking about what is important to us. The hope is that our congregational culture will respond and adapt to the real situations in which we find ourselves, situations filled with possibilities and new adventure.
